

Gurrugal House

The architecture of this home explores white minimalism, where the white façade engages light at all times of the day, reflecting the sunlight beautifully.

This ocean front, private home is surrounded by beautiful scenes of relaxed and serene nature, taking in the expansive views of the pristine and sparkling coast line.

This home is a minimalist space with a focus on exhibiting the clients minimalist-abstract art collection, whilst maintaining harmony with the homes pure and unadorned design, tones, and textures, acting as a gallery itself for the clients extensive art collection. Its built-under design utilises light courts to bring a soft, subtle light deep into the interior spaces. Column-like windows are used to create direct and dramatic forms of light, while the windows themselves perfectly encapsulate the glistening oceans of the coastal surroundings, as though they are photographic moments in time themselves.

Gurrugal House is a training in minimalism in interior design. As a designer, learning that not all spaces in the home need to be "filled" by something was key in creating truly minimalist spaces, by letting them exist as they are in their simplest form.

Rebecca Bartlett

rebeccajbartlett98@gmail.com @emailaddress.com

<https://rebeccaajane.wixsite.com/rebecca-bartlett-int>

Bachelor of Interior Design (Residential)