

Mnemosyne Apartments Serviced Floor

Located in the Sydney suburb of Edgecliff, the Mnemosyne serviced floor project offers 3 x commercial spaces, for those staying in the Mnemosyne serviced apartments, and the general public.

The design process began by mind-mapping various commercial options, taking into consideration the unique and angular shape of the building, the public's needs, and those residing in the apartments. A restaurant, outdoor bar and gym were chosen as the 3 space options.

Inspiration and mood boards were developed to showcase the uniqueness of the building, whilst also incorporating a practical yet luxurious feel. It was essential to ensure consistency across the 3 areas, whilst also giving each space its own unique design due to the different service requirements. AutoCAD floorplans were developed, taking into consideration each space's service requirements such as bathrooms, changerooms and kitchens as well as furniture placement.

The design saw the incorporation of floor-to-ceiling windows to bring the outdoors in, allow natural light to flow through the spaces and showcase the beautiful views of the city skyline. As the space was for commercial use, careful consideration was given to the materials selected. It was important to ensure all materials would be durable, given the constant use of furniture in the space, but also complementary to the luxurious atmosphere being created. Materials selected included white and black marble, dark timbers, brushed gold, brushed black steel, textured plaster and durable upholstery. These materials when incorporated into the spaces alongside an array of greenery and accessories saw the spaces come to life. Following this, rendering of the various spaces was completed which can be seen above.

Chloe White

cwhiteinteriors@gmail.com

<https://chloewhite109.wixsite.com/cwhite-interiors>

Bachelor of Interior Design (Residential)