

Project: Eclectic Kitchen and Dining Space

"Deriving ideas, style and taste from a broad and diverse range of sources."

The body behind this eclectic concept is physical in a clashy form. This space was created for a young family of three. The most important point from the brief was to not embody the classic, white, stark kitchen in anyway. The idea of pulling inspiration from multiple different trends and spaces is a true represent of how we exist. This universal thought was a driving force throughout the design process. This space supports maximalist design choices and ideas. It is bold, bright and vibrant while still fitting the functional needs of the space. The fixed elements are within an organic colour palette and the decorative, stand out pieces are edible to grow with the end user. We as human beings pull and take what we are drawn to and are too complex to be known or visually seen as one style as such. Creatively we attach ourselves to what excites us. Imploding this concept into a visual within a residential space, in the location we feel most at home is encouraging which naturally spills into all areas of life.

Isabella Fischer

@pixie_and_lou

design@pixieandlou.net

Diploma of Interior Design and Decoration